HOQUIAM, Wash. - The City of hoquiam has been awarded the Governor's Smart Communities Award for the third year in a row. "This award is very meaningful to us as recognition of the focus the City of Hoquiam has on downtown re-development and improving pedestrian safety and access — particularly for seniors and the handicapped. Additionally, we are facilitating further revitalization of our downtown through our historic preservation program as well as financial and staff support for our new business association. It's all about partnerships between business, government, and the broader community and this award is very important to us as validation of our efforts," stated Mayor Jack Durney. The ongoing project has focused on public improvements to downtown including new ADA accessible sidewalks, street trees, decorative lamp posts and a new riverfront walkway. Hoquiam has seen a burst in new business activity and business improvements through the opening of Tully's, Levee Feed and Pet Supply, Books on 7th, Pure Clothing, and the 8th Street Ale House to name a few. Future efforts will focus on the waterfront and continuing to stimulate business growth in Hoquiam.

Gov. Chris Gregoire today announced the winners of her 2011 Smart Communities Awards for creating livable communities in Washington State. "Washington state needs to create and maintain vibrant communities if we want to continue to attract a strong workforce and growing businesses," Gregoire said. "I'm proud of the remarkable work that's going on across our state to balance economic growth with sustainable development." The 12 communities recognized this year are considered models in planning for smart growth. They have shown outstanding work in:

- Innovative and wise land use, resource management, enhanced rural preservation, water utility planning, and transportation planning;
- Effective city-county partnerships and achieving significant public participation; and
- Incorporation of public safety and community gathering places, density supporting transportation, and reducing vehicle miles traveled, and downtown revitalization as key components of their growth plans.

This year's Smart Vision Award in Comprehensive Planning winners are Kitsap County, the City of Olympia and the City of Poulsbo. Smart Choices Awards in Implementation of a Comprehensive Plan went to the City of Chelan, City of Bothell and City of Vader/Lewis County. Smart Partnerships Awards in Development Projects were given to the City of Hoquiam, City of Walla Walla and Pierce County. The cities of Waitsburg and Mukilteo both received Judges' Merit Awards. "The forward-thinking leadership demonstrated by these communities is part of what makes Washington a great place to live and do business," said Department of Commerce Director Rogers Weed. "Sustainable and smart growth protects valuable resources and improves our quality of life." Awards will be presented to city winners on June 23 at the Association of Washington Cities conference in Spokane. County winners will receive awards at the Washington State Association of Counties annual meeting on November 16 in Bellevue. The Governor has rewarded outstanding local planning efforts through the Smart Communities Awards since 2006. The Smart Communities Awards are administered by the Growth Management Program at the Washington State Department of Commerce.
