

Road Rage and Sledge Hammers Do Not Mix

Local News

Posted by: David Haviland

Posted on : February 7, 2012 at 7:19 pm

Bothel, WA - The early morning commute on State Route 167 turned into negligent driving and assault charges when two drivers took driving frustrations into their own hands. A two car collision on southbound State Route 167 near Interstate 405 had troopers responding to a 911 report of a driver being struck with a sledge hammer just after 6:30am this morning. Troopers arrived at the scene and contacted the driver, a 33 year old Renton man, of a white Nissan 300ZX who was rubbing his left shoulder stating he had been hit by the driver of a minivan. Washington State Patrol Trooper Julie Startup tells us the driver of a gold GMC minivan, Brett Carter of Bothell, admitted to hitting the Nissan driver with a small sledge hammer because he refused to move out of his van doorway.

Both drivers had pulled onto the right shoulder after the minivan hit the Nissan from behind. The drivers had an angry exchange after following a lane change that the Nissan driver said forced him off the road. After a few moments of travel the Nissan driver moved in front of the minivan and slammed on the brakes. The vehicles moved onto the shoulder and began an argument that ended when the Nissan driver was hit in the shoulder. The driver of the minivan was booked into King County Jail and faces Assault charges. The Nissan driver was cited for Negligent driving for his part in the road rage. Road rage is an assault with a motor vehicle or other dangerous weapon by the operator or passenger of one motor vehicle on the operator or passenger of another motor vehicle caused by an incident that occurred on a roadway. Not allowing anger and frustration to guide behaviors is a key element to a safe commute.