On June 5th, 2009, The Albatross Motel in Westport, Wa, burned down to the ground. The owners, Scott and "Jo" Eun young Langworthy have lived in Westport for many years, raising their children, supporting their community, and working hard to build their business.

Scott is a commercial fisherman who deckhands in the dungeness crab industry out of Westport and also fishes out of Alaska in the summer. Jo took care of the Albatross motel year round. She is a hard worker who always treated guests like family. To her, the Albatross was always your home away from home. They are still supporting two children, one a freshman in college, the other a sophomore in high school.

The Albatross was not only their business but their home as well. On the day of the fire, they managed to escape only with their lives and their dog "Foxy". In a matter of minutes their lives were changed forever. It would be hard to imagine what it would be like to loose your job, your house, all the family cars.....basically everything you know in just one afternoon.

The Langworthy's aren't people who would ask for help themselves, but they need help in order to rebuild their lives. Please help show your support for this local Washington family who have suffered such a devastating loss. Contributions can be made at any branch of Anchor Bank or Bank of America under the following.

"Langworthy Family Relief Fund".

Any other support can be sent to P.o. Box 1546, Westport, Wa 98595.

Thank you for your support.
